DETAILED ACTION

1. The declaration filed 24 September 2009 is accepted.
2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Isakson et al. (U.S. 4,640,838) in view of Dyke (U.S. 4,515,841).

Isakson teaches a vent opening that is covered by a tape that has a layer that is weakened by heating during microwave cooking of food (Figure 4, Example 1). Dyke teaches the use of either a polymer that softens when it is heated or a water soluble polymer such as polyvinyl alcohol that absorbs steam and expands and dissolves to form an opening when a water containing substance is heated in a package (abstract). The instant invention claims a water soluble barrier layer over an opening in a thermal sealed package with a vent hole that is covered by a barrier of a water soluble material. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have used a water soluble instead of a heat sensitive barrier layer in Isakson et al. because Dyke teaches these as alternate substitutes in the bag venting art when the contents of the package or the environment in which it is processed contain water. Variation in the thickness of the soluble layer and variation in the selection of bag substrate and soluble barrier materials is taken as being within the ordinary skill of the art depending on the strength of the seal desired and the desired opening temperatures and pressures, absent unexpected results.

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-20 filed 24 September 2009 have been considered but have not been found to be persuasive.

Applicant argues that Isakson et al. requires both the heat sensitive deposit and the outer layer be of impermeable materials that can only function by softening of the heat deposit from direct action of microwave energy on particles that absorb it in the deposit or the overall function of Isakson et al will be rendered inoperable. The examiner disagrees. It would be possible to substitute a water soluble polymer such as the PVA taught by Dyke that has adhesive properties for element 24 of Figure 4 of Isakson et al. and still have outer layer 22 be made of an impermeable material. The water soluble adhesive would be weakened by water vapor evaporated from the contents of the package (water is the main microwave absorber in most food products). Once it is weakened, pressure from the inside of the container would displace the impermeable outer barrier layer, thus venting the package and preserving the basic function of the package.

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
